

THE OPTIMIST

JUNE, NINETEEN HUNDRED AND FORTY-TWO

THE

O P T I M I S T

The past is dead, though did exist.

The future lives for the optimist.

Entered as second class matter at the Newark Post Office, December 21,
1919, under the act of March 3, 1879.

JUNE, 1942

MRS. RUGGLES

DEDICATION

We of the Senior Class of June 1942 dedicate our yearbook, The Optimist, to one who has been a constant companion and steady sympathizer. She has ever worked in an unheralded and quiet manner for our welfare. It is to our true friend and adviser, Mrs. Ruggles, that we offer our sincere thanks.

*Luck to you,
John

Four years ago there gathered in South Side a group of several hundred students. They had come from all walks of life. Their fathers were doctors or lawyers or clergymen or plumbers or milkmen. They represented various races. They were timid, ill at ease, and some were afraid. However, under capable guidance, their first few arduous weeks of adjustment speedily flew by. As they lost their bewilderment, an entirely new world opened up before them. The lack of regimentation, as in the lower grades, astounded them; the tremendous necessity of initiative, a completely new quality to many, resulted in none too few failures. It was not long, though, before nimble, inquisitive young brains became thoroughly adjusted to the new surroundings. Though many did not realize it, and many still do not, from the moment those young boys and girls entered high school, a period of change engulfed them. The high school years are from a point of progress, the briefest of a person's life. A boy enters; a young man leaves.

These students learned much of a scholarly nature during the ensuing four years, but they also learned a vital rudimentary knowledge of the "outside" world. They were no longer sheltered as in the lower grades; they were made to feel independent. After four years, there emerged a senior who in little or no way resembled the diminutive freshman. The young man found a whisker trimming was necessary at least once a week. Use of the family car and other similar marks of approaching adulthood were prominent. The young women thrilled with their first gown or dinner date. During the four years of high school, much had occurred to influence greatly the future of those little freshmen. During that period of time, each had shaped his own intimate world; each had set up a goal as his destination in life. High school was the most important period of his life.

Now we seniors are going out into the world, each with a fixed destination, either immediate or for the future. Each is setting out in his own manner upon the road of life equipped with his most valuable asset, the knowledge gained during the high school years. Each one of us is equipped and ready because of the patient guidance of the many teachers who were more than teachers,—who were friends. The senior class of today, the seniors of June, 1942, feel firmly convinced that they are prepared for the future that life holds in store for them, whatever it may be. We are venturing forth into a distraught world, but we all are confident of our ability to face the future, undaunted. For this, we thank Mr. Belcher, our principal, and all of the teachers who have so adequately supplied us with this preparation. It is due to their patience and wisdom that we, the next generation, stand ready to assume our obligations.

THE DELTA

By ROBERT ELKES

These are the same old wooden chairs, the same clock is up there beneath the balcony rail, the same murals, stage rooms, speaker's stand—it's all the same, except that it's different. Silly, that statement, but it's true. This is the same South Side auditorium and I've seen six or seven of these graduations—all alike—but this time it is different. This one is mine.

Oh, I've known it was coming. After graduation, then what? What course are you going to choose for your life's work? Here it is, the split second before the deadline, and I don't know. I have often thought of it and tried to figure it out, but—After all, there was—still a year, still five months, a week . . . two hours. Two hours till a diploma starts a race with the world!

You know, it's like a river—this matter of education. 'Way back there, when I was five, my mother took me to a river boat—the first of three I was to board before tonight. There were a number of other kids my age, all new faces. Some of them were looking around quietly; some were crying and some were playing. A lady was trying to help each one separately. She might have called herself, "the Navigator of the Good Ship Kindergarten." For a year we played together, with the teacher leading each enterprise, and then she put us on another boat.

"The Grammar School River Liner." There were a number of navigators on that ship and each taught me about the river as we moved up the current to the next stop. It was a fairly broad river in that section, straight and calm. However, when we reached the little town of "Eighth Grade," the pilot said something about a fork in the river—something about one course that would lead to college and another to business, and one to vocational school. She said I must choose which course I would take.

It wasn't hard to choose. I took a transfer to the "High School"—C. P. Branch and sailed smoothly, learning more about the river and where it led. Once in a while the pilot spoke of a delta that was up ahead. I wondered about it, but waited to see it before I decided which course to take and—"ROBERT ELKES."

What? Huh! Oh . . . my diploma. "Er-a-thank you, sir. Yes, thank you."

Yes, here it is, the delta. Shall I travel the stream called "Professions?" or the brook called "College?" A new canal has been used by many lately. It's called "The Armed Service Canal." How about that one, "Office Work?" or that one, "Technical Training?" or "Music," or "Art," or "Engineering," "Mathematics," "Secretarial Work," or—what? What? I've got to make up my mind. We're leaving the auditorium, leaving South Side, coming to—the delta.

This House of Mine

By ESTHER BERNASH

I built a house the other day,
And in that house stored my every dream
My every hope, my every aspiration,
My every ambition.

I built it firmly,
Laid its foundation carefully,
So that no tumult of the earth
And no thunderbolt could make it crumble to the ground.

I placed it high on a hill
Away from the ugliness of the city,
The smoke, the clamor,
The systematic humdrum of business.

I surrounded it with the hearty of nature:
The sunny marigolds, the black-eyed Susans
The buttercups, the roses and
The soft, fresh, clean, green grass.

I filled it with truth, kindness and love,
Filled it with the teachings of God.
I filled every corner with a warm glow of fraternity.

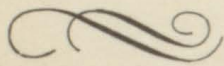

I placed a ladder at the foot of the hill,
Which leads straight to the door of my house.
I have built my citadel.
Now I must, I must with every attempt
Every step, I must climb to the top.

Music of the Strings

By ALICE TERRY

Swinging, tilting melody made by magic bows
Rich and full in body, the youthful music grows—
The violins rush madly down the ever-changing scale;
The violas tumble wildly after in the crashing major gale;
The 'cellos sing in robust voice, low and firm and strong;
The basses in their majesty rejoice, the harmonies prolong.
A theme of strength is reaped, a seed that music sows;
A symphony of beauty made by magic bows.

Human Nature

While at home, we wish to be
At our house down by the sea.
At our house down by the sea,
Back at home we wish to be.
—BURTON FERN

My education is hard and slow.
I have to tramp to school in snow,
Or roast to death in summer's glow.
I like it.

It makes me mix with bores, and sports,
To stand for teacher's wise retorts,
And fellow students of many sorts.
I like it.

I've got to smile and hide my spleen,
When folks get stubborn, strict, or mean,
It pays the kid who'll use his bean,
I like it.

—LILLIAN ROTH

School Girl Crush

By DOROTHY HELLMAN

You're sixteen—and lightheaded.
And the world is a beautiful bubble tinted
With the rosy glow of youth—
And you have fond dreams of handsome princes
On dashing chargers—
You're holding the world on the tip of your Little finger—
Ah youth—sweet, innocent youth!
You're flattered when he asks you to a dance,
And you coyly refuse, the first time,
Remembering what your mother told you about being too bold—
But hoping—
Oh, praying—
He'll ask you again.
You blush and
You stutter—
It's all just a part of "sixteen."
And then, it happens—
You fall in love—
Thrillingly—
Desperately in love!
At first it's rather bewildering—
It's different from what you imagined it would be—
No stars gleaming—
No brave knight rushing out to save you—
Nothing so romantic as that.
It just happens!
There you were—
And there he was—
He looked at you—
And you looked at him—
And at that instant there were a million firecrackers exploding—
And a hundred church bells ringing—
And you knew that it was love.
You took home your algebra book—
But the only equation you solved was—
Two dark eyes and a generous mouth with a humorous tilt at the corners
Equaled him.

You took home your bookkeeping book—
But instead of concentrating on balancing debits and credits—
You wondered if the love that you received
Balanced the love that you gave.
With English, it was the same—
Poor Juliet—
Oh—you could sympathize with her—
Could understand why it was less painful to die,
Than to go on living without Romeo.
Your other friends became irritating nuisances—
They were puzzled at your behavior—
They eyed you askance—
Then they left—
But you didn't care—
What was the loss of a few minors?
You still had him!
Ah, sweet sixteen and sweet dreams—
They can't last forever—
Something went wrong—
He didn't seem to care so much,
Or was it just your overworked imagination?
Somehow you knew—
Somehow you knew that as far as he was concerned
You were just another insignificant, duped female
Who had succumbed to his all too many charms.
That's when your world toppled over,
And your rosy bubble burst—
And its contents were revealed to you in the form of tears—
Young foolish bitter tears—that we all must shed—
Sooner—or—later.
You woke up the next morning—
An older but wiser girl—
And you resolved that you were all through with men—
Until the next one came along—

Cinquain

—ELIOT BRAMS

SENIOR

John Jarosinski—graduated from lineman to star backfield player. He will be remembered for his ability to carry the ball through. Two years of excellent varsity football are to his credit.

Theodore Glicksman—played lineman for two varsity seasons. He was one of the outstanding linemen on the 1941 Championship football team.

Horton Young—another star lineman, played two varsity seasons. Good on both the offensive and defense. The opponents soon learned he was a man to be reckoned with.

William Davis—played two seasons of football. He also was catcher on the baseball team.

Gordon Ruth—though unable to play a full season of football because of injury, he nevertheless proved his worth during the time he was in there, fighting for South Side.

Lew Yablonsky—played first base on the 1941 Championship baseball team. He is noted for having knocked in many of the winning runs.

LETTERMEN

Edward Radetsky — captain of the 1942 swimming team. Both a free style and back stroke swimmer. His efforts were rewarded with a medal in the city meet.

Emanuel Levine—a versatile swimmer who ranked high in diving, free style, and breast stroke swimming. He was awarded two medals at city meets.

Max Klayman—has two years of fencing to his credit. He was captain during his last season.

Burton Glickman — sprouted into a fine fencer during the last season.

Eliot Brams—has two seasons of table tennis to his credit. He served as captain during the last year.

Betty Tarasuk—carried the honors for the girls in hockey.

Janet Wilk—shared the honors for the girls with Betty.

Honorable mention to the managers—Irving Kopp, Sollie Mantell, Burton Fern and William Hodes.

Perhaps your years of maximum responsibility are those in which your children are completing their schooling and reaching the self-supporting stage.

You delight to devote a large part of the family income to their comfort and well-being, until they can earn their own way.

At this time, more than ever, there is need for insurance on the life of the breadwinner in the home, and so we have our "Family Income" plan for just such a job.

Ask for our booklet on this important subject.
